

An Excellent New Song,

CALLED,

CREDIT RESTORED, in the Year of our Lord God, 1711.

To the Tune of, Come prithee, Horace, hold up thy Head.

1. (State,
ALL Britains rejoyce at this Turn of the
Which rescu'd from Plunder the Nation;
From this happy year you for ever may
Of Credit the Restoration. (date
La, la, &c.

2.
To begin with the Bank, which the Learned aver;
Of Credit the measure most true is,
It flourishes so, that One Hundred Pounds there,
Now at least worth a Hundred and Two is.
La, la, &c.

3.
Tho' once it was more, as the Faction does boast,
Intrinsic Worth never can vary:
Their Twenty and Seven, they find to their Cost,
Like our Two is but Imaginary.
La, la, &c.

4.
And to shew that the Landed Interest rises
In this happy Administration,
Our Navy for Cheese pays at least double Prices;
And Hogs are in high Reputation,
La, la, &c.

5.
And thus whilst our Statesmen, with vigilant Care,
Made all such Commodities dearer;
In the whole we have lost one Year's Tax for the War,
And therefore the Peace must be nearer.
La, la, &c.

6.
Next open to All a Subscription-Book stood,
In which if some Fools would not enter,
These Statesmen not only propos'd what was Good,
But they likewise compel'd them to venture.
La, la, &c.

7.
And such fair Accounts the Subscribers will see;
That surely there can be no losing;
For Shepherd and Blunt the Directors shall be,
With More of Her M——y's chusing.
La, la, &c.

8.
The Love of his Prince then whoever expects,
Or wishes his Fortune were double,
In Mortimer's Hole must lay all his Effects,
Where they never will give him more Trouble.
La, la, &c.

9.
For the Door is now shut, and since all Men agree
Things stand upon solid Foundations;
Those ignorant Wretches distracted must be,
Who can fear in this Court Alterations.
La, la, &c.

10.
And E—I R——s shall go to the House of Hanover,
To fix the Right Hereditary;

So now the Pretender can never come over;
Nor the settled Succession miscarry.
La, la, &c.

11.
And further so watchful our Rulers have been,
That Perkin should never enslave ye;
The Man, who prefer'd him to our Gracious Queen;
Is not to preside o'er the Navy.
La, la, &c.

12.
And less would they trust the renown'd P——gb
In that Post, tho' he much laid about him;
They knew if he rambled the Continent thorough,
Sea-Affairs would go better without him.
La, la, &c.

13.
For the Seamen may gain, in the South-Sea Trade;
Their Pay, since so rudely they crave it;
And who can complain that a Debt is unpaid?
When the Lubbards for fetching may have it.
La, la, &c.

14. (trice;
Those extravagant Rogues would have spent in a
What they gain'd with much Danger and Trouble;
But our Governors prudent have found this Device,
That they might not their Families bubble.
La, la, &c.

15. (to bear;
Great Schemes like to these might be well brought
Since the Persons imploy'd were not small;
For who should they be but the good M——r,
And the beautiful A——l.
La, la, &c.

16.
Young Cato to them had the next mighty Share;
And All must acknowledge that he is
*As busy and warm in * his Country's Affair,*
As in her own Hive any Bee is, * Examiner
La, la, &c. the last.

17.
For an Instance of this he in Publick maintain'd,
That the Debt was of meer Grace and Favour;
Which though this Great Orator fully explain'd,
Yet Her M——y paid it, God save Her.
La, la, &c.

18. (South-Sea;
Thus our Debts being clear'd from the fruitful
In Wealth we shall daily grow stronger;
Tho' Stock-Jobbing fails, why dismay'd should we be,
Since we want to be trusted no longer.
La, la, &c.

19.
For a Box is just landed, by which we may find
Our Work done in France and Pern is;
And the long wish'd for Peace already is sign'd
Betwixt Arthur More and King Lewis.
La, la, &c.
